

King's Research Portal

Link to publication record in King's Research Portal

Citation for published version (APA):

Smith, J. W. E. (2018, Nov 21). Naval Wargaming: It's Development and Relationship to the development of Maritime/Naval Strategic Theory.

Citing this paper

Please note that where the full-text provided on King's Research Portal is the Author Accepted Manuscript or Post-Print version this may differ from the final Published version. If citing, it is advised that you check and use the publisher's definitive version for pagination, volume/issue, and date of publication details. And where the final published version is provided on the Research Portal, if citing you are again advised to check the publisher's website for any subsequent corrections.

General rights

Copyright and moral rights for the publications made accessible in the Research Portal are retained by the authors and/or other copyright owners and it is a condition of accessing publications that users recognize and abide by the legal requirements associated with these rights.

- Users may download and print one copy of any publication from the Research Portal for the purpose of private study or research.
- You may not further distribute the material or use it for any profit-making activity or commercial gain
- You may freely distribute the URL identifying the publication in the Research Portal

Take down policy

If you believe that this document breaches copyright please contact librarypure@kcl.ac.uk providing details, and we will remove access to the work immediately and investigate your claim.

Naval Wargaming at Kings College London.

The Naval War Gaming cell at Kings College London is part of the Laughton Unit in the Department of War Studies. The Laughton Unit educates and researches in the field of naval history, military theory and maritime strategy to support and shape the evolution of naval history as a tool across a broad spectrum of disciplines and debates in the world around us. It is the prime intellectual forum for naval matters at Kings College London.

Naval wargaming is unique tool to research events of the past and understand them further to scholars and students alike. Naval war gaming not only supports education but enhances understanding of the maritime way of warfare.

The research unit works in a range of mediums such as physical models, computer simulation and 3D renderings to further its mission focus on research in naval history and maritime strategy.

The cell is postgraduate led and often collaborates with the U.S Naval War College.

www.laughtonunit.com

